To Our Valued Friends and Shareholders:

Following a weak year in calendar 2022, equity markets in the United States have been mixed year-to-date 2023. While growth stock indices such as the Russell 1000® Growth Index remain up significantly through October 31st, value indices such as the Russell 1000® Value index have barely budged. Much of the growth indices performance so far this year has been due to the seven largest stocks by market capitalization in the S&P 500 Index. These stocks (dubbed the Magnificent Seven) are Apple, Alphabet, Amazon, Microsoft, Meta Platforms, Nvidia and Tesla. Through September 30th, this group of stocks rose 55%. The rest of the S&P 500 was up less than 2.0%. In addition, markets are continuing to grapple with the level and direction of interest rates. As of October 31st, two-year U.S. Treasury yields were at 5.0%, a rate not seen since June 2006 while 30-year mortgage rates were near 7.8%, a rate not seen since September 2000. However, there is some hope that Federal Reserve bankers are near the end of their plans to raise rates to curb inflation. With the beginning of the Hamas-Israel war in mid-October, investors have a new set of risks to consider. As a reminder, our investment process is dynamic and should guide us into stocks that we believe will fare well in this environment.

To review our “sell” discipline briefly, we sell stocks for several reasons: they reach our price targets; they show signs of fundamental weakness; they show signs of technical weakness and: there are more attractive investment opportunities elsewhere. For the Chase Growth Fund, we estimate we generated $0.68 per share in long-term gains and $0.03 per share in short-term gains.

The payment date for the distribution of income and capital gains will be December 12, 2023. All shareholders of record as of December 11, 2023, will receive the estimated distributions below on December 12th. If you have elected to reinvest income and capital gains from the fund, the appropriate number of shares will be purchased and added to your account on December 12th. If you selected cash payments for both income and capital gains, these will be processed on the 12th as well.

Chase Growth Fund:

Estimated* Short-Term Capital Gains	$0.03/share
Estimated* Long-Term Capital Gains	$0.68/share

*Estimates based on 10/30/23 book numbers. Estimates may change due to additional tax adjustments.

Please be aware that the NAVs will decrease on December 12th because of these distributions but the decrease does not represent a loss in value of your investment as you will have received the income in the form of additional shares, or a cash payment as noted above. For those of you invested in a taxable account, the distribution will be a taxable event and you will receive a Form 1099 from your financial intermediary.

Please contact Peter Tuz, (434) 293-9104 option 2 or tuz@chaseinv.com, or Jennifer King (434) 293-9104 option 4 or jenniferking@chaseinv.com if you have any questions or would like additional information regarding the distribution.
